

Mary Eliza Mahoney

Nurse

Mary Eliza Mahoney was an American nurse and the first African American registered nurse. She is known for her pioneering work in the field of nursing and her commitment to promoting equality and diversity in healthcare. Mahoney worked as a private nurse for many years before being accepted into nursing school at the age of 33. She graduated from the New England Hospital for Women and Children Training School for Nurses in 1879, becoming the first African American woman to earn a nursing degree. Mahoney went on to work as a nurse for more than 40 years, advocating for the rights of African American nurses and patients and promoting better working conditions for healthcare workers. Her legacy as a trailblazing nurse and advocate for diversity in healthcare has inspired generations of nurses and healthcare professionals and has helped to promote equality and justice for all.
